A Pretty Little Story.

"Bobby Flax," a very pretty little story in the November number of Munsey's Magazine, is from the pen of Miss Margaret Kenna, daughter of the late Senator John E. Kenna, and a graduate of Mt. de Chantal. Miss Kenna has an inherited fondness for the State her father loved so well and from one of his favorite haunts in Greenbrier county she has selected the curly headed little boy who is the central figure in her story and who gives to it its name. He is a manly little fellow, and bears up bravely under trials that would crush many an older one. His heroism, his devotion to his mother and his manly character appeal strongly to the reader, who readily grants him the place of prominence in the story allotted by the writer, although his part is really a minor one, and he is but the means of showing how a man's true character is oftentimes made known, the best that is in him brought out by some deep sorrow. The story of Bobby is beautifully told, and is the work of one who evidently possesses much literary talent, although she has never before been known as a writer for the magazines—Wheeling Register.

Haunted Woods.

Strange goings on have been reported concerning a certain neck of woods, where a road from Frost, joins the Huntersville, and Green Bank road, near where Levi Sharp lives. This is the spot where E.
R. Mason, Esq., foreman of the lumber firm of Smith, Whiting & Co., was held up two winters ago.
For a long time a certain stump was placed in the middle of the Frost road, of nights, until a man hailed it miles away. Since then a certain log, requiring two men to lift it, has been put in instead.

A certain gentleman who is accustomed to pass here late in the night, sees or hears something mysterious, every night, and his horse takes a regular fit of plunging.
One night he saw something in shape of a man, by a large tree, but could not tell whether it was human or not. He refrained from firing on it. White pieces of cloth are found tied to bushes here, and not very far away is the place where Renick Kerr's hogs were killed. People have missed a lot of stock that ranged in these woods.

A thorough investigation is talked of being made.

Valuable Woods.

Many of the finest woods in existence are yet unknown, or only slightly known, to the manufacturers of wood in the civilized world.
The woods of Central and South America are, perhaps, the most remarkable as well as the least known.
In the yet untouched forests of this continent are many woods far finer than any of those now in use.
These woods range from pure white to jet black in color, and many of them are most beautifully marked and veined. Some of them are so hard that they turn the edges of axes, chisels, and other tools, while the band saw cuts them only slowly.
In the Columbian Exposition there were many displays of little known woods, and the finest of them were those from Argentine Republic, Brazil, and other South America countries. Some of these southern woods yielded to the teeth of the band saw, not the ordinary sawdust, but fine powder, fine as the finest flour, so hard were the woods.
Some of them burn but slowly.
Others possess qualities that keep them free from insects. Some of them seem to be practically indestractible by air and water. All along the eastern slopes of the Andes, up to the snow line on those great elevations, throughout all the great river valleys, and in some of the wide acres of level country in South America are great forests of fine woods that are specially fit for the finest cabinet and furniture work, and also for shipbuilding, carpentry, and other industrial arts in which wood is the "raw material." These great forests are now an unknown quantity in the commercial world, but they will come rapidly into the knowledge of men and into industrial use when once the railroad has reached them. Before many years, it is safe to predict, the South America and Central America republics will be threaded by railroads, and then those wonderful woods will be drawn upon to supply the demand for new and fine wood in all the civilized countries.—Ex.

The Last of the Buffaloes.

Hunters know that buffaloes will never unless forced cross the iron of a railroad track, and this fact figured largely in the unfortunate work of extermination which these animals have suffered since the Western plains have been spanned by railroads.

The greatest blow delt the bison herds of the Northwest was the completion of the Northern Pacific track west from Bismarck to the Rocky Mountains. The road practically divided the herds, and those to the south were soon swallowed up in the general slaughter waged by Indians, pot, hide and tongue hunters, foreign sportsman and others who were out to kill anything they saw on sight.

This was during the winter of 1882-83. The buffaloes to the north were in many scattered bands, but there was one great herd of not less than 75,000 head, which had found a temporary refuge in the triangle formed by the Musselshell Missouri and Yellowstone rivers in Montana, and as yet they had not been "smelled out" by either red or white hunters. But they were as surely doomed as though already killed, for the railroad iron cut them off from the southern range, and the Indians of the Canadian northwest, as well as those of our country, barred their retreat into the far North and so they were hemmed in between the two, with no possibility of escape in either direction. This last herd was completely wiped out of existence in less than four months, and before the close of the year there were but a few singles and pairs left as fugitives in that vast country where but a year or two before they could have been counted almost by the hundreds of thousands. At the end of that season 800,000 buffalo hides were shipped east from Glen-dive, on the Yellowstone River.— Scientific American.

First Actor (pulling the trigger of a revolver six times) — "Die you miserable villain!" Second Actor—"Your pistol has missed fire, Sir Rudolph, but I am smitten with remorse for my many crimes, and will die according to your wish." Then he rolled on the stage in agony while curtain slowly descended amid the cheers and laughter of the audience.—Ex.
